

Management - Concept

Management is a theory about how to supervise daily tasks in order to achieve the goals of a business or organization. Management includes the tasks of supervising, organizing, personnel policy, leadership, control and attracting various human, financial, technological and natural resources. In order to become a professional manager one should get a comprehensive education, which is summarized in the following scheme:

1. General methods of analysis and business administration courses (mainly during the first three courses);
2. Management courses.

Modern management can be grouped into two main directions:

1. The first is based on a leadership role in an organization;
2. The second one is based on quantitative analysis.

Students will learn both quantitative analysis, as well as acquire leadership skills. Our courses cover a variety of management spheres, and as a whole, serve to create highly qualified manager who can be a successful employee in any organization.
